New Travel Book Features Divine Feminine in the World's Most Exotic Locations

“Entering author Karen Tate's Venice apartment is like discovering an intact pyramid. Everywhere are artifacts and goddesses. As an advocate of goddess spirituality, Tate has traveled much of the world to visit places where figures from ancient mythology were venerated. Now she has written a book, “Sacred Places of Goddess: 108 Destinations,” to help other seekers of the “divine feminine” to journey along the same paths.”

-- Lisa Richardson, LA Times Staff Reporter
